

Fertility is estimated once nationally; spatial and subgroup variation comes from applying that common schedule to local population by age — no spatially-varying fertility model is fitted.